1. Polish troops from the Warsaw military post left the city on and after 25 June 1950, according to a Polish railroad employee assigned to trains on the Warsaw-Berlin line.
2. There was much excitement among soldiers' dependents, since the units carried full field equipment and their destination was secret.*

* Comment. The troops may have gone to a troop training grounds as their departure from Warsaw occurred at the time Polish troops usually leave for troop training grounds.
